IOM Weekly Programming

IOM organized a migrant sensitive health services training in Benghazi for 16 health care workers (physicians, nurses, and lab technicians) from the Eastern region. The training aimed at enhancing the capacities of healthcare providers to address the health and protection needs of migrants.

IOM Libya trained CSOs and INGOs on a comprehensive approach to protection case management, the training covered essential steps, including identification, assessment, assistance provision, and case worker well-being.

IOM implemented the women's salon initiative in Kufra, benefiting 60 women, including 35 migrants and internally displaced persons (IDPs). The initiative aims to empower women through sessions focused on personal and practical growth, covering topics such as human development, time management, and financial management. A notable number of Sudanese women participated (35), many of whom have faced significant hardships. Additionally, yoga and meditation sessions, although uncommon in the region, were introduced and warmly received by participants, offering an inclusive indoor activity that fosters relaxation and community engagement in a setting where outdoor sports are less accessible to women. Feedback from participants, particularly Sudanese, indicated a strengthened sense of empowerment and resilience, with many expressing their hope for similar programs in the future to continue building a connected and cohesive community in Kufra.
